

Connecticut did not share any borders with French territory (see inset map), yet it helped the British win the French and Indian War by sending thousands of troops to fight. One conflict that was not settled until after the Colonies gained their independence from Britain was between Connecticut and Pennsylvania over a tract of land called Westmoreland (green area on map). Pennsylvania eventually won this battle, but settlers from Connecticut were allowed to keep their lands.