

European settlement in Virginia began in the Tidewater region (pink area) and spread west, first to Piedmont (green area) and then to the mountains and valleys beyond (tan area). After the French and Indian War, the British established the Proclamation Line of 1763 (dotted black line) as the boundary between its colonies and Indian lands.